Mr. Taft to the French opera Satur- cost? day night, and in attempting to keep where he belonged, at the left elbow the lobby. The officer vanked Murphy back. Murphy, who had put in seven years guarding President Roosevelt, and had learned the strenuous life, tried to break away, whereupon four more police officers lighted on him. In one of his breathing spells Murphy looked the uniformed bunch over and decided that he was pinched. But he had reckoned without the secretary of war. President Taft had passed into the house and had taken a seat in the box. Dickinson saw Mur-phy, who he knew well, under two layers of policemen, and stopped in a casual way to ask what was going on. Being trom Tennessee, the secretary has his own way of doing things.
